❖ PARISH NOTES

Isaiah's vision, Jesus brings the invitation down to earth as he sends the 72 evangelists out to proclaim the reign of God. From the get-go, Jesus tells them to pray for more missionaries because there is too much for so few of them to do. Rather than fantasize about simplistic harmony, he lays it out for them with the stark realism of a prophet: I am sending you out as lambs among wolves. (How is this for a vocation poster: "Enjoy the excitement and challenge of being lambs among wolves!") Every profession has standards, and the church specifies the gender and educational requirements for different ministries. Jesus, too, demanded certain qualifications of those who would represent him. In order to further his mission, they had to be ready to go out, carrying "no money bag, no sack, no sandals." They weren't to dawdle along the way; they were to stay with the first person who offered them hospitality and never complain about the food. Their job description? Teach: "The kingdom of God is at hand." Do it by curing the sick and sharing your peace. And to those inclined to retribution, he said, "Whatever town does not receive you, go out into the streets and say, 'The dust of your town that clings to our feet, even that we shake off against you.' Isaiah's proclamation has a dual purpose. First, as mentioned, he is reassuring the people that God has not forgotten them. His images of God's tender care reinforce that message. Secondly, Isaiah uses these images — and so many others through the three parts of the Book of Isaiah — to open people's imagination. It is too easy for people of any epoch to have a limited, excessively self-referent image of salvation. Isaiah reminds us that God will care for us in ways that exceed our hopes and enlarge our dreams.

❖ THE SPIRIT OF THE LITURGY

Jesus sends 72 disciples out into the world, Lambs among wolves... their faith in Jesus, and their ministry partner.

In the life of discipleship, the question is not what you need but who. We don't walk this journey alone. We need each other for support, encouragement, a listening ear, perhaps even advice at times. We learn from the experience of others who have walked before us, and we share our own experience with those who walk with us.

People who are hurting — all of us — need to know that the kingdom of God is at hand. That should not instill further fear and shame, but hope. For the kingdom of our God brings love, liberation, reconciliation and resurrection. And in so doing, by going out into the world two-by-two, we can bring hope to that hurting, bruised and broken world.

Low Gluten Hosts are available.

Please let an usher or the sacristan know before mass.

Prayer Requests

Please keep all of the men and women in the armed forces and our allies who work daily to keep us free and for those who have returned either broken of mind or body in your weekly prayers.
