❖ PARISH NOTES

The Samaritan comes along. He is cautious, very aware of his vulnerability as a despised outsider. He has avoided making eye contact with people on the road so far, not wanting to draw attention. Then, he comes upon the half-dead man on the side of the road, and he sees the same fears he is been trying to contain in himself come to life in painful and explicit detail. “But for the grace of God go I,” you might imagine him whispering. He gets to work, pulling oil and wine out of his bag and dressing the man’s wounds. When Jesus says that the Samaritan was “moved” with compassion to treat the neighbor as himself, he implicitly suggests that many of us may feel compassion without being moved to action by it, as the priest and the Levite likely were. We feel compassion from a distance, with our social status, privileges, self-concern and platitudes serving as buffers that protect our pain from other people’s pain. The Scriptures tell us time and again that we must love our neighbor as ourselves, and in this Gospel story Jesus suggests to us that in order to do this, we must be willing to look past our titles, uniforms, masks and responsibilities to see ourselves in our neighbors.

When we see the needs of our global neighbors, the first thing necessary is to remember that we are all part of the same family and to allow that to discomfort us. Then, with the weight of the neighbor in our heart, we can assess what we have in goods, talent, influence, etc. that we can use to make a difference for the ones in need. We can’t do it all, but doing something makes all the difference to the ones we touch. Such action is the most striking way to proclaim the Gospel.

❖ THE SPIRIT OF THE LITURGY

Jesus' story challenges that narrow interpretation. He suggests that the neighbor is anyone we see who is in need. This presents an almost overwhelming challenge in an age of global communications. How are we to respond to all the needs we can see today? The Samaritan exhibited two essential qualities that made him a true neighbor. First, he saw the injured man as one like himself. Not knowing his name, faith or past reputation, he saw him simply as a brother in need. Secondly, the Samaritan saw his own possessions and time as potential gifts rather than treasures to be guarded. When we see the needs of our global neighbors, the first thing necessary is to remember that we are all part of the same family and to allow that to discomfort us. Then, with the weight of the neighbor in our heart, we can assess what we have in goods, talent, influence, etc. that we can use to make a difference for the ones in need. We can't do it all, but doing something makes all the difference to the ones we touch.

Low Gluten Hosts are available.
Please let an usher or the sacristan

All parishioners, please note, as a sign of caring for one another, the Church has responded to the needs of those who are gluten-intolerant: low gluten hosts are available at every Mass upon request. If these can be tolerated by a person with gluten intolerance, please let an usher or the sacristan know before Mass that there is need for the low gluten host. (This must be done every time as we do not reserve consecrated low-gluten hosts in the Tabernacle). A specifically-designated pyx (communion box) is held by the Priest Presider with only low gluten hosts. The communicant needs to be in the Presider's line. The communicant identifies himself or herself to the Priest Presider as they approach for communion asking for a low gluten host.

Of course, should arrangements not be able to be made before Mass, or if low gluten hosts cannot be tolerated, then it is perfectly acceptable for the gluten intolerant to receive communion under the form of the Precious Blood at any time it is offered. (Wine does not contain gluten). Please be aware that care and precaution are taken but the danger of wheat gluten to the gluten-intolerant can't be prevented completely. Please also note that "100% gluten free" hosts are not possible and are not used.

Visiting from St Paul's,
